

Climbing All The Way to The Top

Kigerl works hard to grow her passion as a rock climber

Rock climbing is what most would view as an unnecessary risk that only fools pursue, but Jessica Kigerl '20 doesn't think this. She views it as even more than a sport, even more than a thrill-seeker's dream. Kigerl sees rock climbing as an experience, an experience that fuels her determination to do great.

"[Accomplishing your goals] can be really hard and you're definitely gonna get frustrated at times, but honestly you have to find something and you have to stick with it." Kigerl knows all about reluctance, especially when it comes to overcoming difficulty.

On the other hand, she knows about sticking with one thing and being determined to achieve it. "I feel like it's kind of revealed aspects of my personality to the point of where if I know if I'm really passionate about something and if I don't get it I'll get really frustrated not with what I'm doing but with myself for not being able to do it," she said. "I'll keep trying it and keep getting it."

Even though rock climbing is widely viewed as a major and foolish risk, to Kigerl it's not. To her, it is a fuel source for her determination to attain virtuosity.
