IT WASN'T SUCH A RUFF YEAR

As a therapy dog, Duran's top priority is to comfort others. The five-year-old German Shepard-Pointer mix Duran has worked as a therapy dog for four and a half years, with the help of his owner, Mrs. Laura Wilson. "When we get here in the morning, he's basically running into the school," Mrs. Wilson said.

Duran helps relieve stress in different ways. "It triggers all those feel good chemicals in your brain simply just by petting him," Mrs. Wilson said. Duran completed his initial training and certification on Sept 20, 2014 by an organization called Freedom Service Dogs of America, where he learned tricks to help people in need.

"I think he enhances the climate and culture of our school just by bringing positivity, comfort and joy to a lot of people," Mrs. Wilson continued.

He completed his recertification Jan 18, so he can continue to be a beneficial part of student's lives. Photo by Juliana Beans

"I can connect to my peers by socializing with them and helping with their school work," Maddux Stahl (7)
