

LOVE YOUR SPIRIT
Evelyn Haskins (12), Sofia Rodero (12), Emily Reed (12), and Racie Krasiewicz (12) cheer on the Coyotes at a home game. "I love being a Coyote because of the school spirit, it brings everyone together and it's been so fun to celebrate my last year at Monarch with my best friends," Reed said. The girls were all in for their senior year spirit.

LOVE
black and gold

SKO YOTES!

The teacher calls my name and I jump awake, wiping a puddle of drool the size of Lake Michigan off my desk with my hoodie sleeve.

Panic seizes my chest when I realize I had fallen asleep. Again... During second period. "Qué haces este fin de semana?"

AND...

I anxiously watched the clock, praying that class would end soon so I could get to the assembly.

As soon as the bell rang I was up out of my chair and into the hallway. Finally assembly time!

Energy vibrates off the senior section and I adjust my golden boa.

Voices bounce off the walls as everyone noisily discusses plans for the blackout game that evening. "Party City after school"... "Burgers at the Tailgate..."

AND...

Then I screamed myself hoarse- along with the rest of the gym in an epic game of Zorb ball...

The seniors won, per usual. The upperclassmen chanted their class cheers back and forth, as underclassmen counted down the days until they were dressed in gold and black.

"S-S-SEN-I-I-IOR-SEN-IOR-GOOOOOOO SENIORS!"

AND...

Then I run through the Centaurus parking lot, dodging the cars as I join the crowd surrounding Grill Club.

I throw my hands up in the air dusting everything with flour as the first whistle sounded. That stuff never comes out.

you know

WE LOVED IT.

photo by elizabeth danekind
page by anna wexler and gwendolyn mcgarry