

THIS ADVENTURE

WE RAN SILENTLY ACROSS LAWNS ARMED WITH TOILET PAPER AND TORTILLAS, WHISPERING LOUDLY AND CARING LITTLE.

Shivering, we woke up early to chase the sunrise to Red Rocks, CHEEKS RED AND HEARTS FULL.

We sang loud and danced hard to our new anthems: "thank u next", "SICKO MODE", "High Hopes", "Love Lies"; FINALLY FEELING UNDERSTOOD by someone, uplifted by the lyrics.

Gathering in Clarity Commons, we wrote messages to our friends in chalk on the sidewalk, BLACK AND GOLD RIBBONS pinned to our backpacks and shirts. Coffee and Chipotle fueled us through late night cram sessions, only distracted by controversial tweets and an endless Instagram feed.

FEELING ENTHUSIASTIC AND IMPULSIVE, we planned ski trips the morning of and bought concert tickets hours before.

We fearlessly drove up slick mountain roads like professionals, braving feet of snow and ice to pursue our relentless mountain passions.

Mud stuck to our shoes, we ignored the burning in our calves to reach the top of Daniels Park.

Stopped in our tracks, we stared in amazement at the shades of blue and orange disappearing over the horizon.

We will never forget these feelings and these people, never forget all that we accomplished to bring us to this moment with these friends who fueled the

PASSION BURNING INSIDE OF US.

Stepping into the limo on the way to prom,

Opening up the plane window, staring down on the city of Chicago,

Reaching through the sunroof of your best friend's car staring at the stars,

Feeling so big and so small, but truly knowing that you are a part of something entirely you.

SOMETHING THAT TRULY MATTERS.

Hands directing the audience's attention to his biggest trick yet, "MAGIC" MARK LEDERHOS, 12, reveals the video he took months before the Homecoming Talent Show. Egging on the crowd, a group of senior boys lead the student section in a cheer at the Heritage football game.

In the early hours of sunlight, LAUREN SANCHEZ, 11, AND PAIGE MILES-COLTHUP, 11, look out on to Red Rocks after waking up at 5:00 a.m. in order to catch the sunrise. Decked out in neon, the staff dances shamelessly in the Homecoming assembly in an energizing and exciting routine. Dressed in their best representation of the 20's, the boys and girls Swim and Dive teams cheer and throw candy during the Homecoming parade.
