

photo by Mrs. Storr

putting on a Mock Trial...

For students in Honors American Studies, Mrs. Storr's classroom briefly became a courtroom. Each student was assigned a different role in a trial based on A Farewell to Arms. "They have to speak as if they were a character in the book," explained Mrs. Storr, "The kids say it's the most fun thing they do all year."

●●● "I played an attorney. Having to cross-examine on the spot was really hard, but it was fun." Rachel Baker (11)

●●● "It was highly stressful. I was a witness, so making sure I got all my facts straight was the hardest part. The best part was that our side won." Faith Fowler (11)

●●● "Supporting our argument against the defense without knowing what their argument was yet was pretty hard." Amalie Harvey (11)

●●● "I was an attorney. I had to read the book and formulate an argument about why the other people's are entirely wrong in every way. Wearing a fedora and trench coat was the best part." Ben Wilson (11)

●●● "I was the prosecution lawyer. I wrote lines of questions for witnesses and had to prove that the other team's witnesses weren't valid. The best part was working with my friends and winning the trial." Matt Galloway (11)

photo by Mrs. Calabretta

1. ON TRIAL: Rachel Baker (11) questions her witness in the mock trial. 2. FIELD TRIP: Asher Hogan (11) takes some readings while on the Mission to Mars field trip.

photo by Mrs. Calabretta

photo by Mr. Matt Lahn

photo by Mr. Matt Lahn

photo by Mr. Matt Lahn

photo by Abby VanEaton

6. READY, SET, ACTION! Sophmores, Tristan Nakanishi, Preston Shoop, Ava Cooreman, Silje Ostrem, and Brendan Carroll perform a skit about British Imperialism in India. 7. FINE ART: Josh Wisam (11) sculpts some clay in art class.

pictures tell the Story...

For a spring macro photography assignment students looked at the interesting world of the small.

photo by Ryan Hook (11)

photo by Corinne Wheeler (12)

photo by Jo Lahn (11)

photo by Joey Wheelock (12)

photo by Timothy Schmidt (12)