

PREPARIN' Sophomore Dominic Lucero prepares food in Culinary Essentials. Lucero enjoyed this class because of everything it taught him about making food. He said, "It taught me how to like be calm when making food too, not how to crack under stress." photo by isabella marin

BAKIN' Senior Timothy Aragon carries supplies for his Culinary Essentials class. This class helped students to learn the basics of cooking. Aragon said, "I think I'm on the right track to be prepared [for adulthood]." photo by isabella marin

WHAT'S COOKIN'

MIXIN' Sophomore Elizabeth Soltis is using a mixer in Culinary Essentials. Soltis felt that Culinary Essentials was one class that would help her in the future. She said, "I know how to make my family dinner if I need to." photo by isabella marin

CELEBRATE! Senior Ashton Kerr cheers after learning that he qualified for Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) state. DECA has helped him to take school seriously in terms of his future. Kerr said, "When I go to DECA I have to put a serious face on and kind of just show maturity and responsibility." photo by xavier ramo

FCCLA Freshman EmmaLee Nickerson and Freshman Olivia Eddy are members of Family, Career and Community Leaders of America (FCCLA). Been apart of FCCLA Nickerson got to explore her field of interest. She said, "We're creating a project to hopefully get us to learn furthermore about that project of what were interested [in]." photo by mackenzie latham

DECA Senior Leila Daoud is a member of Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA). She participated at State Qualifiers. Daoud said, "DECA has been beneficial to my adulthood because it [taught] me how to conduct myself professionally... in interviews." photo by xavier ramos

THEY DID SURGERY ON A BANANA Senior Erica Wong sutures a banana in scrubs club. She enjoyed being apart of this club because it helped prepare for her future. Wong said, "I want to get into the medical field eventually in the future." photo by jennifer adams

“JUST ADULT THINGS”

Clubs and classes help prepare students for adulthood

Being a teenager in today's society comes with many challenges and expectations. This past year, Legacy's students were expected to be more responsible and mature than ever before. Many students took part in certain classes and clubs such as Culinary Essentials, Child Development, Model UN, DECA, FCCLA, and Scrubs club.

"IF ANYTHING, AS A STUDENT, I THINK WE'RE SUPPRESSED FROM OUR TRUE POTENTIAL OF ADULTHOOD." -ARAM GEVORGIAN

Sophomore Dominic Lucero said, "[high school has] taught me a lot of responsibility because... in high school you realize that you need to get down on your schoolwork." Junior Aram Gevorgian felt differently, "If anything, as a student, I think we're suppressed from our true potential of adulthood." copy by emily kassowitz

WAAAAH! Sophomore Emma Armstrong is changing a robot baby in the hall. Armstrong was apart of Child Development. She said it helped her prepare for, "Babysitting and when I have kids of my own." photo by isabella marin

WACK! Junior Aram Gevorgian smacks down his gavel in Model United Nations (UN). Being apart of many clubs helped Gevorgian gain many life experiences he didn't get in class. He said, "I have matured emotionally and physically more, not as a student, but rather as an individual in my clubs." photo by isabella marin

