

Siblings.

Not just sharing a house but also a classroom

From the beginning, siblings learn how to share everything. Now in high school some siblings learn how to share a classroom.

Sisters Asiah Figueroa, senior and Jayda Hernandez, sophomore, have Spanish together. Figueroa is an aid for Mr. Herrera and Hernandez is in the class.

"It's different having my sister in class with me," Figueroa said. "It's my last year—I'm trying to spend as much time with my sister."

Figueroa and Hernandez also ride to school and play softball and soccer together.

"We do everything together," Figueroa said.

Senior Naomi Rubio and junior Jaclyn Rubio have three hours of cosmetology together at Lamar Community College. They start at 8:30 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. then when it is time for fourth hour they come to school together.

"It is always great having my sister help me in class." Naomi said. "She can give me a second opinion on my things."

Naomi and Jaclyn also see their brother freshman Benjamin Rubio.

Naomi and Jaclyn said, "He's a great, loving, kind brother, but sometimes he could be a little over protective."

Freshmen siblings Chloey Palmer and Kaiden Cole have four classes together. Palmer and Cole have second hour marketing, third hour physical science, fourth hour algebra, and fifth hour U.S. history I together.

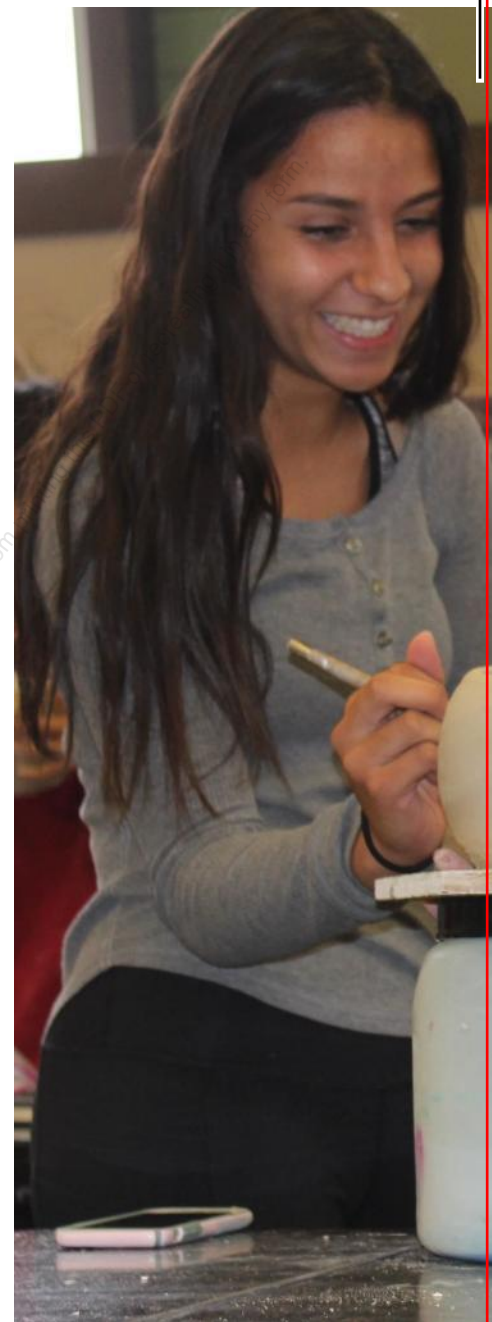

Palmer said she enjoys being around her brother.

"We are really sarcastic and we like to make jokes. It's really fun having him in class," Palmer said.

But he does sometimes get annoying, she added.

"It's more fun when I have my sister in class because I get on her nervous a lot," Cole said, "because it's funny."
