KENZIE BAY

Interviewed by Emma Brudigan and
Rebecca Mathey

Being the Wish kid was positive and positively stressful. I felt like I had to live up to expectations in a way, but then I was just myself and it turned out great. I just wanted to be a part of everything and I got an amazing experience out of it.

First, Make a Wish asked me if I wanted to be a wish kid, but it wasn't guaranteed if I would get a wish. They looked at my personality and then decided my school. I was able to meet Legend's StuGov and find out more about what the week would look like. When I actually got to participate in the week, it was super fun and the best part of the process. After the week was over, you are left with this amazing life-changing experience.

My wish was to go to Australia and scuba dive at the Great Barrier Reef. I love the ocean and I know I love coral reefs and coral restoration, so that's what I originally wanted to do. The Great Barrier Reef is really deteriorating so I wanted to go see it before it's completely gone. It was in a way symbolic because I could finally do something without pain and just be able to live without medical problems. It was definitely a milestone for me.

I chose to come to Legend part-time after Wish Week because I love the community here and it felt like a place I could be supported and have people understand.

“It was positive and positively stressful. I felt like I had to live up to expectations in a way, but then I was just myself and it turned out great. I just wanted to be part of everything and I got an amazing experience out of it.”
