

Don't Be Silent Isabella Ramey (12) participates in Kaitlyn Jensen (12)'s photo shoot. "The picture depicts the search for identity, especially in high school. It's disorienting and it feels like you're searching for something just out of reach. Identity to me is your most true, outward self at any time. Not allowing others to silence you and speaking your truth builds confidence and encourages others to do the same," Ramey said. The veil itself represented any obstacles that may hold someone back from finding their identity.

remember everywhere

Speaking out at the dinner table, protesting at the Women's March in Denver, having opinions on social distancing, these were our voices.

We rushed to social media tweeting about Super Tuesday, learning about different gender identities during Unity Week, these were topics we will all remember.

Everyone had an identity to call their own: gender, religion, heritage, culture, sexuality, and even spaces where we felt the most authentic. We were brought together in our community.

We were everywhere speaking up, expressing our thoughts, fighting injustice, and changing the world day by day. Even to voting in the 2020 election, we will never forget our freedoms.

Live everywhere.
