

PLAY ON. Jazz Band member Annabel Le (8) plays the piano during a concert on February 26. "Jazz Band was a fun experience, and I'm glad I joined. Everyone has their own unique talent and humor," she said. She juggled a lot on her plate this year, and created a lot memories. "One of my favorite memories was joining the Lion King as stage crew. Every day you had a new challenge to conquer and you could think freely without any restraint," said Le.

A LITTLE HELP, HERE? With the help of Mr. Vasquez, Annie Diesslin solves a problem in science. She was a driven student who worked hard to succeed. "Especially this year I learned that life is about the journey and less about the destination. A lot of times I get so focused on my dreams and goals, that I need to remember to enjoy the journey of life." One school event that she especially enjoyed was "watching the play 'The Lion King.' The whole set and production was so well done and so fun to watch," she said.

LOOK CLOSELY. In his science class, Kalin Hufford (7) looks at single cell organisms under a microscope. Though he made a lot of memories this year, one of his favorites happened while making a video in advisement because "It was funny, and I got to do it with my friends." When asked what he learned this year, he said, "The biggest lesson I learned this year was to be nice to everyone and help others when needed."

ETHING Something

We care about stuff kids have always cared about: family and friends, fitting in, crushes, grades and our appearance. But there's stuff my parents never had had to worry about, like getting burned on Insta, getting grounded from our phones and totally losing our social life, getting the coronavirus, and global warming. Like, how are we supposed to fix that? It's a lot all at once, and I just need to get to soccer practice. Look, I don't know what it'll all mean in the future, or even tomorrow for that matter. I can only tell you what it's like right here, right now, in the middle of something.
