

Jacob Phipps, 9th

Meghan Kenemuth, 11th

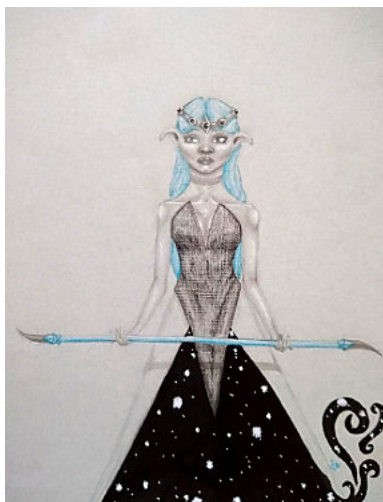

Max Cochran-Gragg, 9th

Imagination flies high

Lunar escapades

Creativity can spread beyond just making an art piece. Daisey Solt, 11th, enjoys creating her own characters for her stories in her free time. "I have a ton of characters, I've been making them since 3rd grade, but back then they didn't have names or anything, just sort of a story." In this piece is a person named Inas Vasya, daughter of Lord Vasya, who is the noble residing over the land of the moon Balachandra. This specific piece was done with a colored pencil, a graphite pencil, a black marker, and a white gel pen. Since creating the concept, it has only gotten more fleshed out and will continue to do so in the future.

Feeling Blue Travis Haas's photo titled "Water Explosion" was snapped in his Intro to Digital Photography class. Madison Gil-Twitt's photograph was minimally edited in Photoshop (right).

Customer is allowed to have objects outside of the margin.

TRIM LINE

TRIM LINE

Creative Captures

Smartphones are ubiquitous, which means that the ability to snap a photo any time, any where is more accessible than ever before. But the skill to capture a beautiful shot takes persistence, vision, and a little luck. Digital & Creative Photo students go out in the world and share their unique visions.

TAKE A SHOT 1) Ninth grader Kylie Pflueger's black and white composition shows off a beloved equine friend. 2) Josiah Power's, 9th, landscape captured high contrast and vivid hues. 3) In a creative photo composition, Melanie Ford, 10th, artfully designed a color highlight with a black and white background. 4) In a moment of zen, Eli Jaiteh's meditating frog showed up a worm's eye view. 5) A peaceful kayak centers the composition of another Josiah Powers original.

