

1. GET ROWDY! Sierra Martinez (12) cheers on students in her last bonfire. Martinez advised future poms to, "Just keep smiling and make the most out of the time you are there." Poms cheers added true pep to the event. photo by Holly Rossman

2. DRUMROLL PLEASE. Senior Harrison Dico-Jekot smiles as he watches the students jam to his beat. Dico-Jekot mentioned, "It was a thrilling drumming experience, it is something I will never forget." The drum line kept the crowds energy high throughout the evening. photo by Holly Rossman

HO-DOWN SHOW-DOWN

western themed dance had students throwin' down mad dance moves

This years dance started off with students gathering to get ready, take pictures and share a meal before partying the night away. When they arrived at the dance, the beat of the music and bright lights brought spirits to a high. Students sang enthusiastically along to the song lyrics blasting over the speakers. Charlie Goffinet (10) noted, "I really enjoyed the music and the dancing." Between the cupid shuffle and the hoedown, the night turned into one truly spectacular event. Students dressed to meet the wild west theme and one student, Zack Brier (11), defied expectations by sporting a Spider Man costume under his dress clothes.

4. CHEESE. Students pose for a photo in the golden light of the bonfire. Jeanloup Auzias (12) commented that the bonfire was, "Super fun and I got to spend a lot of time with my friends." For seniors like Auzias, the bonfire was the beginning of many last chances to enjoy high school traditions. photo by Ellie Fuchs

5. LAUGH. Sawyer Gannon (9) pushes his way towards the flames, hoping for a better view of the fire and all of the nights entertainment. Gannon said, "The bonfire was super exciting and it was a fun night." One highlight for the students was the massive conga line contest that circled the fire. photo by Holly Rossman

6. BA DUM TSSS. Sophomore Finn Walker smiles and claps along with fellow band members during the drum cadence. "Playing with all my friends was so fun," said Walker. Students all danced around the fire as the music played. photo by Holly Rossman

7. PLAY IT. Fiona Keleher (9) plays her clarinet during the Pride of Littleton's rendition of "Bad Guy" by Billie Eilish. "Playing in front of the bonfire was so cool," Keleher exclaimed. The band played high energy tunes like "Bad Guy", "Pretty Fly", and "Hips Don't Lie". photo by Holly Rossman homecoming kicks off with a bonfire like to cheer at her last bonfire, "The thought of it being my last one made me sad, but it helped me realize that every moment counts." The band played through the night, as every kid participated in a massive conga line that danced all around the flames. Students howled and laughed into the night sky. It was clear this years bonfire was one for the books.

This year's homecoming week kicked off with the annual bonfire. The flames splashed against the night sky, lighting the faces of the excited students. Kids participated in a pie eating contest. The thrilling competition resulted in Brandon Molina (11) crushing his opponents, while the Littleton's poms team cheered him on. Senior Sierra Martinez described what it was
