

Marching Band

MARCHES THROUGH THE YEAR

Through all the turmoil of COVID-19, the marching band was still able to play music and march this season. The band wasn't able to have a full competition season, and Marching Band was structured differently this year compared to other years. They mostly performed at Vista's home football games, and had practice during the week as well. Mr. Ethan Hall said, "We didn't have a full roster because people were out due to quarantine or other reasons. It was show up when you can, if you can't we just continue the show! This school year hasn't been the best, but we can definitely say we made the most of it." 1. 3. Mykayla Thompson, 10, Nathan Lopez, 12, & Carter Hollis, 10, perform in the Marching and Pep Band during one of the fall football games.

SPOTLIGHT ON OUR DRUM MAJORS

“Ben was a drum major this year for his senior year. His favorite instrument was the flute.”

“My favorite part of the year was the last home game we played where we had the full field touchdown and I was conducting. We played fight song and it felt like I was on top of the world.”

WHAT'S SHOW CHOIR MISSING THIS YEAR

"I miss the performances. I miss being around all my friends and just having that energy and the magical moments of performing."
- Lily Cathey, 11

"It's harder to sing, and we haven't had a full classroom, so it affects class."
- Riley Ayotte, 11

SHOW CHOIR'S CANCELED SEASON

Show choir has had no season with COVID-19. However, they still have classes and singing rehearsals. Most of the students were bummed out that they don't get to have a season, but those returning next year are still preparing for the next season. Sadly they don't get to practice dancing numbers, as well as they don't get to see the gang all together this year. 6. In person learners in the show choir practice on a new piece in class.

4. Abigail Sarver, 12, and Ethan Van Horn, 10, play their heart out on their flutes as the pep band keeps the crowds spirits raised.

5. Kyle Woodcock, 10, gets ready to start playing the tenor drums. The drum line is always a crowd and student favorite.
