LIVING YOUNG LIFE

Adventurous and Connected

This adventurous nondenominational church group at Doherty could connect with each other almost like a second family. Students found a new normal for socializing and building each other up in positive ways, and having fun with one another as covid continued to affect the way we gathered with our friends. "I am so grateful for all of the life long friends I have made in Young Life. I learned so much about the importance of a strong community and how to maintain relationships. Young Life has been the highlight of my high school career," said Senior Ella Adler.

Young Life was best described as a party with a purpose.

They would safely get together to build community with each other, have some fun, and talk about different aspects in life that they all can relate too. Being in Young Life can become life-changing for people because it gives everyone who's a part of it a chance to reflect on their lives and think about the direction in which they're headed. "During COVID we still got to meet outside and go on hikes. The kids were clearly hungry for community and Young Life offered a safe option," said sponsor of Young Life, Erin Ahnfeldt.

"If anyone is considering joining Young Life, I urge you to do it, you won't regret it," said Senior Makalea Wilkie.

Together is Better

Young Life students experience many adventures. The group thrives together and offers continuous support for one another. "I love Young Life and the sense of community and purpose I find when I am there," said Junior Grace Morrison.
