

AH, A NEW TRIMESTER.

Time to begin again. With, as usual, everything changing around us. But at the moment, we are worrying about demanding,

IMMEDIATE PROBLEMS,

like having to stay up late to work on the

END OF UNIT HISTORY PROJECT, or brainstorming ways to get that C- in science up to a B to stay in

HONORS.

Of course, it's still total freakout mode when people go in public without a MASK.

But parents and relatives are getting

VACCINATED

and it seems like everything is going back to "NORMAL."

It's funny to even mention that word anymore

But seriously, things are FINALLY looking up.

We are just fantasizing about Summer vacation just like any other year, and already stressing about the school year that will come after it. That's "way-in-the-future" thinking. Hopefully that's when

"NORMAL" actually happens.

BUT WHO KNOWS?

Like we said, everything is changing. And we'll be here no matter what, prepared to BRING OUR ALL.

DOES IT COMPUTE? Charlie Weicher (7) looks over an assignment on his chromebook during art class. This is the first year that chromebooks were used almost exclusively in every class. "I've barely handed in any paper assignments this year," said Weicher. "It's all been on the chromebook, and I kind of prefer it because you can't lose your work."
