

New to Alamosa High School as of this year is the Esports team. Esports is a form of competition using video games. It takes the form of organized multi-player video game competitions either individually or in teams. The Alamosa High School team consists of about 16 members as of right now. The team mainly plays a game called Rocket League, which is essentially soccer but with cars in place of actual players. They compete against other high schools from Colorado with their three teams. They play/practice Monday through Wednesday in the TSJC room from around 4-6pm. Thursdays are tournament days where they play games against rival schools, and compete to win. Fridays are a remote day, where the team plays from their homes over Discord from 4 to 6. As the program continues to grow, the Esports team hopes to get interest up in order for the team to stay popular. If more people join, then there could be a possibility that games can become more of a variety, and Rocket League can be one of many games. This new sport is the perfect opportunity for students who have a high knowledge in video games.
