You're settling in now, you really are. Hatak's AP Chemistry class doesn't seem as hard as it did in October, or maybe you're just better at starting things at 11:45. You still don't get enough sleep, but at least you've learned that hitting the alarm just 20 minutes before school starts isn't quite impossible. And you still haven't learned the bell schedule, and you probably never will. Luckily, you've realized what time Conway's class starts so that you don't have to come up with an elaborate story on why you're late. It's a gradual change, really. It's looking back at photos from September and realizing that it's been four months of this. Four months of Bosco stick lunches and posts on @arapbadparking can really change a person— you've found yourself.

AFTER SCHOOL IN CLAIRTY COMMONS, snow falls for the first time in weeks. The 2021-2022 winter was an unusually dry one, featuring record low snowfall rates. Photo by A. Evangelista
