

written in the STARS

Zodiac signs let us look deeper into the manifestations of the universe.

"Being born in a certain season can affect your personality because of the weather but not everyone is the same because they are born in the same month."
-Sara Paris '23

photo by: elizabeth schechner

photo by: olivia alaska

"Birth date has no affect on someones personality."
-Aaron Tran '23

BELIEVE it or not

Does astrology actually dictate how we live?

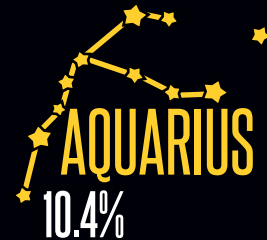

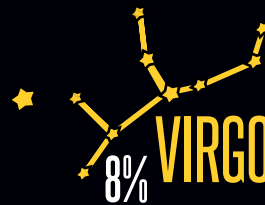

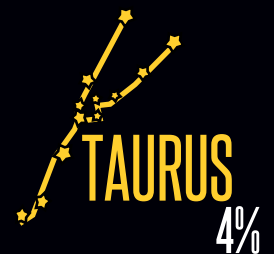

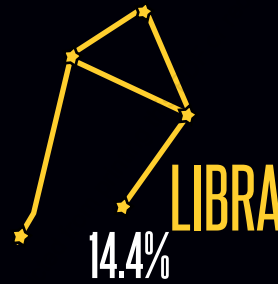

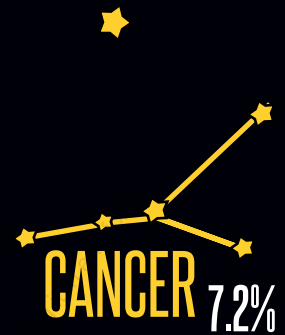

opposites ATTRACT

Students and teachers share their experiences in compatibility within their relationships.

Josie Hill '23 (pictured with Braden Sears '23) expresses her thoughts on her zodiac sign and their compatibility. "I am a textbook Virgo, but I am the opposite with who I am compatible with. I am supposed to be compatible with water signs, but I get along better with air signs, and [Braden] is an Aquarius. I heard if your rising signs are the same [it means that] you met in a past life, and our risings are the same, so I thought that was pretty cool." Although the pair is not meant to get along, according to their signs, they have not seen it as an obstacle and continue to be harmonious despite their contradictory astrological concept.

photo by: olivia alaska

Mr. Justin Abbott and Mrs. Alexis Hafner Abbott, as a Pisces and Taurus respectively, are theorized as compatible. Although they do not completely believe in astrology, they agree they are quite suitable. "I'm definitely dependable and a great listener, which makes me more easily compatible with other people. I think there are aspects of me that are stubborn, and I think he would say I am [stubborn] for sure," Mrs. Hafner Abbott says. The couple's individual characteristics help them maintain a balanced relationship.

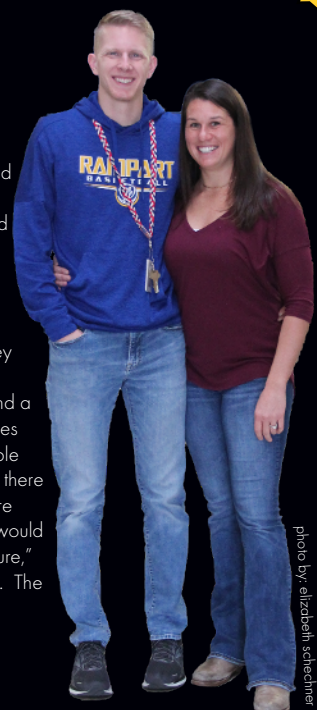

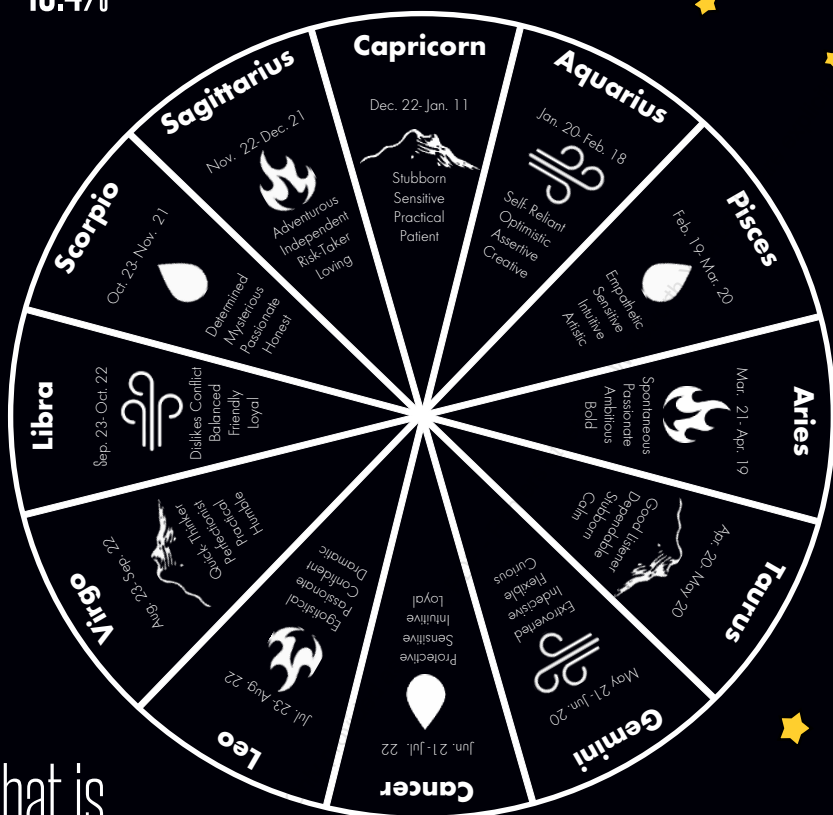

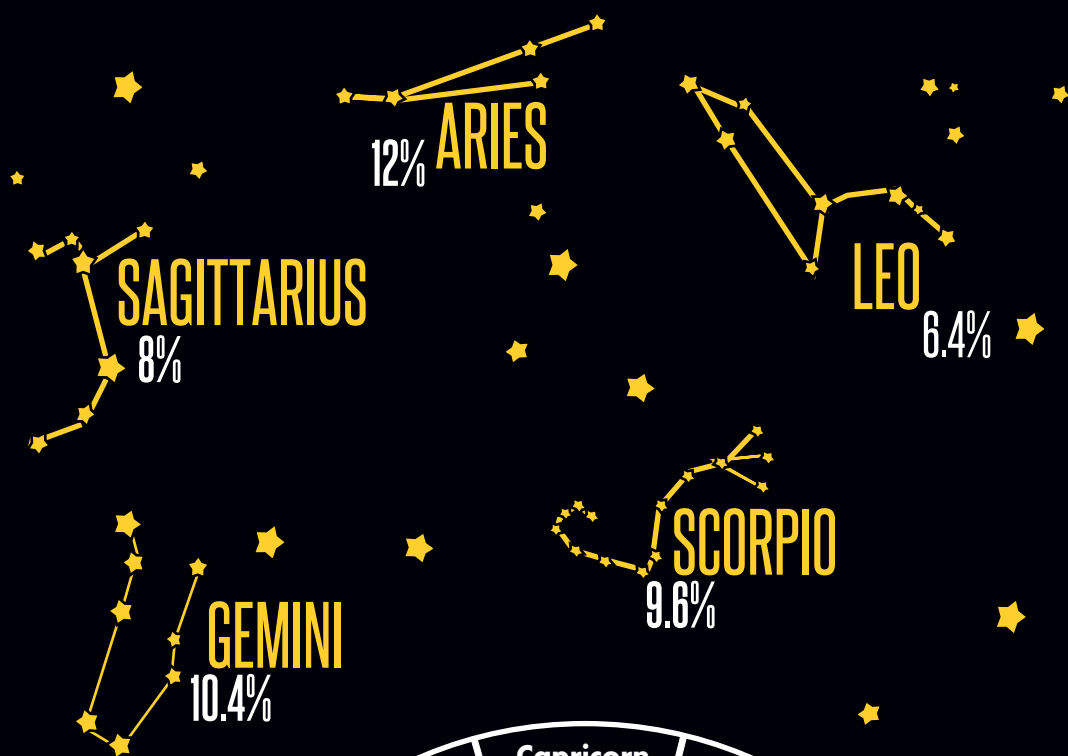

photo by: elizabeth schechner

what is ASTROLOGY?

An explanation of what zodiac signs are and why they matter.

Astrological zodiac signs is often a topic that is extremely criticized and heavily analyzed. Many judge the concept itself before knowing anything about it, due to the outlandish nature of believing in something that is 'written in the stars'. The details of astrology can become very intricate and complicated to many because of how an individual can immerse themselves into the qualities of their particular sign. An individual's astrological sign is based on the day of their birth and which of the 12 constellations the sun was 'in' on that day. Everyone has a zodiac sign, and all claims made are all theoretical predictions with justifications supporting them. Some do not believe these ideas and justify their disbelief in that each description or trait is too general and can be applied to anyone—but others think that each birth chart and characteristic holds some semblance of accuracy. Malaina Krompegal '23 agrees. She said, "I genuinely think everybody 100% matches their chart, and some people are just in denial because there is some negative traits that come along with each." Krompegal continued, "[Everyone] has a zodiac chart that is based off of the location and time of the planets and starts when you were born." Astrology is a form of self-expression for some, and can help people get to know one another on a deeper level through similarities within their own zodiac signs.

*percentages in the graphic correspond to student's zodiac signs (according to responses from a school form)

how ACCURATE is your sign?

Students and staff weigh in on their astrological beliefs.

"I have never seen proof of it being accurate." -Jackson Harris '25

"I do not follow [it] too closely. It is entertaining to see what is said about my sign, but I do not let it dictate how I live my life." -Mrs. Leslie Gordon

"I relate to being an extrovert, and more social and open to people that I don't know." -DeAndre McFarlane '24

"I just read some stuff on it and said 'Wow, this is a lot like me.'" -Riley Cole '25

"It just suits me and everything about it goes with my personality." -Sonia Henderson '24