

Creative Corner

Lindsey Zamboni-Cutter, Editor in Chief, Social Media Editor

Lindsey Zamboni-Cutter

Sophie Zhou has been creating art for 11 years. She creates art both as a catharsis and to calm herself. This piece was made of charcoal to represent the mask people wear to hide their pain.

Katie Campbell has always had high hopes for her painting, She feels that art means everything to her. This piece is called Frozen Sunset, and blends her love of sunsets with her desire to challenge herself with painting a frozen lake.

Max Campbell likes to create art that is expressive. Max uses art to clear his mind and give him something to anticipate in college.

For Sophia Mezei, creating art was a challenge because of the difficulty of shading. However, Mezei found that the pen emphasized hair and hands excellently. She derived the idea from her painting after drawing an interesting face in her exhaustion after swim practice.