

FUTURE BUSINESS LEADERS OF AMERICA

Along with other numerous clubs, Alamosa High School has a Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) group. Business teacher Amanda Stagner leads the group bringing them together to learn the basics of business careers through academic competitions, leadership development, and educational programs. FBLA is helpful for individuals to learn the importance of leadership and communication to better their work ethic and mind-set for the future. The goal is to create a post-graduation career plan and to have the ability to understand fundamental business principles. AHS FBLA students competed at the District Leadership Conference at Adams State University on Feb. 7, 2023. Fourteen ribbons were awarded in first, second and third place to qualify 11 students for the State Competition; four first place finishes spotlighted the local winnings.

PUTTING IN THE WORK
Courtney Jaquez and Andrew Solis work together to study for their FBLA districts competition.

RECEIVING AWARDS
Autumn McColm stands stage before receiving a first place award at FBLA districts.

EYES ON THE PRIZE
Daniel Cody and Micaela Almaguer pose after winning 2nd place for the topic, Entrepreneurship at FBLA districts.

