

BOO. Sophomore Bode Beal at the Eagle cemetery during the EVTV package on "ghost hunting".

GET READY. Sophomores Gaby Stewart and Hattie Martinez at Wish Week assembly watch while waiting for photo opportunities.

BAKING TIME. Emit Brown ('24) and Angela Pena ('23) bake it up in the food and nutrition room for the weekly EVTV episode. During this episode the trick was one was blindfolded, the other was mute and they had to bake a cake together.

VOTE NOAH. Noah Rudin ('23) and Blake Anderson ('25) in an interview about Noah becoming "President of the United States" in a mock election.

SAY CHEESE. The semester 1 yearbook class posing for a photo at the end of the semester yearbook celebration party.

STUDENT MEDIA

INTERVIEW. Junior Will Gerdes interviewing a student about the EVTV episode on school lunches. The episode covered where students went and how much money they were spending

STICK TO THE SCRIPT. Cooper Filmore ('24), Makalah Teehee ('24), and Leslie Lopez ('25) introducing the EVTV episode of the week.

SQUEEZE IN. EVTV students class poses for a picture in the broadcast studio where EVTV episodes are filmed.

Ready. Set. Action!

Eagle Valley High School has an amazing student media department. Kids not only learn more about the media industry, but how it works and what it is like to be involved. With intro to journalism, advanced digital media, advanced journalism (EVTV), and yearbook there is a large variation in what student's can take. There is something different for every student interested in the media department. "The best aspect of the media program is using the platform created to reach the whole school. Being a big part of EVTV has allowed me to try and make a change in our school, even if it was controversial." - Jack Josef ('23)

IS THAT RIGHT? Juniors Brooke Staten and Makalah Teehee at Devil Duels assembly at the student media table set up for EVTV coverage.

FOCUS. Junior and Executive Producer Emit Brown recording for the EVTV episode that includes the annual Devil Duels assembly.

READY TO ROLL. Senior and Executive Producer Jack Josef with a camera on a tripod ready to video for EVTV.

