STORY
Our names set us apart
from one another, unique to each individual...

UNIQUELY YOU. Your name is something that sticks with you for the rest of your life. For Richie Nguyen, his name set a standard for him, one that he tried to live up to. "It originated from a movie. It was from Richie Rich because my parents thought he was smart. As a kid it set a standard on me," Nguyen said. Photo by M. Kilbourne.

FRIENDSHIPS. Friends help to shape our identity and influence how we grow as human beings. In Jacob's case, an old friend of his helped to create his timeless nickname. "He looked at my last name, Collings-Wiedner, and just said that's a mouthful, we'll just call you CW," Jacob said. It has stuck with him years after it's making. Photo by M. Kilbourne.

FOR LIFE. Your family can be some of the most influential people in your life. For freshman Logan McAllister, his parents gave him a name and a future. "I was named after the city my parents met in, which is coincidentally where I want to go to college," McAllister said. Logan is a town in Utah, where he hopes to find himself in a short four years. TRADITION. Many families cherish the traditions that are passed amongst generations. For freshman Emmy Connell, her family traditions start from the very beginning with their names. "All the oldest cousins in my family have the middle name Grace," Connell said. Her middle name represents her, the past generations, and those to come. Photo by M. Kilbourne.

OUR NAMES

"My mom was a teacher and she never had a Joel. So I guess she just picked that one."
Joel Hahn

"My name came from a necklace that my mom was given. It was Jade, so Jaydon."
Jaydon Smith

"It was my great, great, great something like that Uncle's name. And it's also my mom's middle name."
