a single word

believe in you | Confidence can be really important for people to get through a rough day. Hannah Mehidie explains, "Confident" is one word I would use to describe myself.

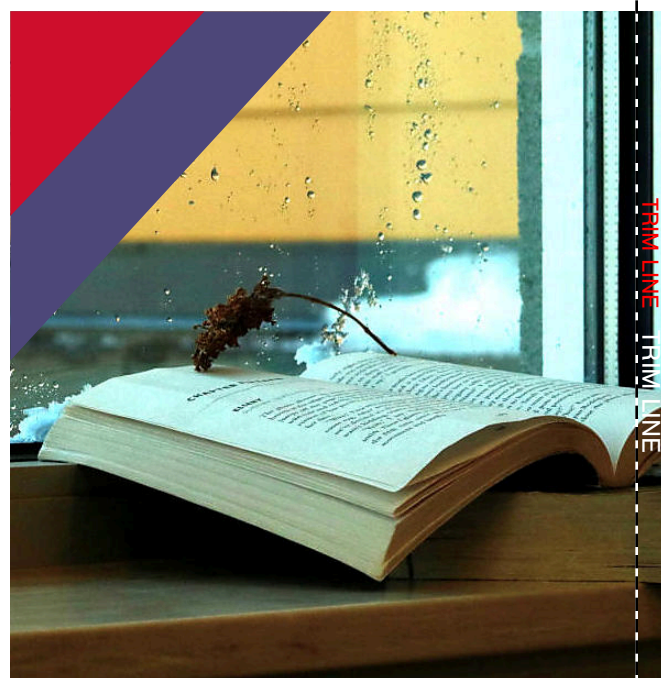

People's words don't really affect me, I guess. I feel more comfortable around people when I'm confident."

Obviously, it isn't the first time I've heard, and I were in the auditorium to perform, so we must have experienced at least once, but it's my first time in this new life. He's amazing. And not just because he's making mistakes. The notes flow like water, flowing down, changing in tone and rhythm, like the piano is singing. I wish I knew more about music to really appreciate it. I'm crossing the lawn almost without looking at my foot in front of the other. I'm following describe yourself | Words can change someone forever whether it's constructive or degrading. Aurelia Koelmel had posted a video and someone had complimented them on it. "It has been my favorite compliment since," Aurelia said. This compliment meant a lot to Aurelia and gave them a positive outlook.

top two

keep your head up | Motivation can be something different for everyone. Ian Garza expressed, "My parents and peers are inspiration to me because I want to impress my parents and be better than my peers." For Alyssa Grigsby, motivation comes from her family. "My dad motivates me to do certain things like try new things on my skateboard by giving me words of inspiration," Alyssa explained.

inspiring individuals

who inspires you | Leaders can be a big inspiration to many. Grace Kingen is inspired by Ruth Bader Ginsburg. "She was a women's rights leader and she never gave up. I'm a big advocate for women's rights and she was the person that made that happen," expressed Grace. Other students may say that their parents are most inspirational. "My dad is my biggest inspiration because he was really successful as a student and grownup," Lukas Robinson stated.
