

once in a lifetime | On September 8, the yearbook class embarked on an exciting adventure. They attended a one day workshop all about yearbook. "I liked to learn more about photography and more about yearbook," mentioned Isabelle Daniels.

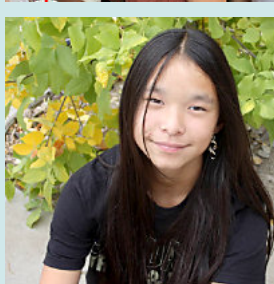

scrumptious starbucks | Grace Kingen, Ravel LaBerge, Nathan Harding, and Cadence Fredricey stopped at Starbucks for snacks and drinks on the long drive home. "It gave us passion to sing our hearts out, and then we crashed and burned," laughed Grace.

sonic stop | On the way home from the workshop, Rylee Cox, Morgan McManus, Edie Lindberg, Charlie Trojanowski, and Nyah Bieser stopped for refreshments at Sonic. "I really enjoyed it. It was a fun treat after the trip," Charlie commented.

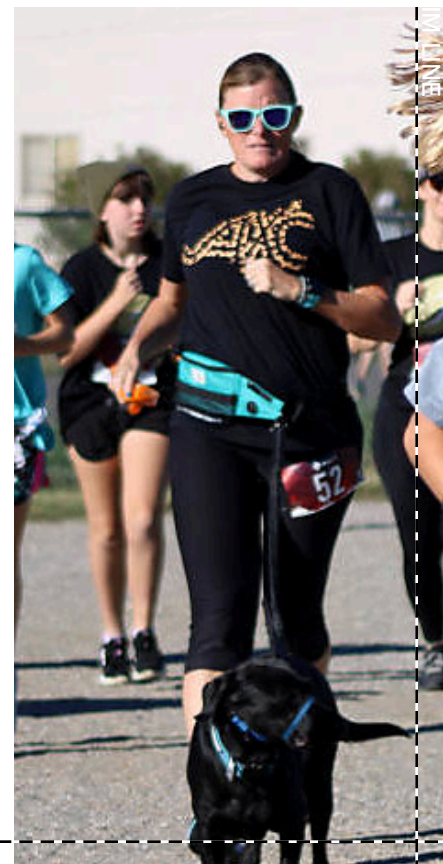

decisions to make | Not every student in the class attended the workshop. Isabella Meyer explained that "I am glad that I stayed because then I was able to study for a lot of tests that were coming up."

taking a step

jogging jags | While most students were sleeping in, some were getting ready for a run. The Jag Jog took place on an early Saturday morning. Maggie Chandler ran and won third place in the 5K. "My aunt did it and my cousin did it so it was just like a fun family thing," Maggie explained. Tyler Hamilton also ran the 5K. "I did it with my mom," Tyler commented. The Jag Jog was a good activity for Maggie's and Tyler's family to ban or not to ban | There are varied opinions about whether schools should be allowed to ban books. According to Maya Nayberg, "If you ban something, it's really counterintuitive. People are going to find a way to read it. Also, the banned books have perspectives that you will not find in non-banned books." Maya found a book called Simon vs. the Homo Sapiens Agenda that was hidden around the school in celebration of banned book week.

new perspectives | Aiden Peck has a slightly different perspective on book banning. Like Maya, he believes that most books should not be banned. However, Aiden believes there are some exceptions. "I feel like its like making fun of a religion or saying a religion is bad or something, then I feel like then they should be allowed to ban them. But other than that, I don't feel like books are going to make a big influence on a lot of people."

finishing frenzy | "It was nice to finish the race," said Emmett Cook. Emmett got 5th place overall in the race.

tired troubles | Nathan Fecko mentioned, "Usually, I like running, but sometimes when I'm really tired, I don't feel like it."
