Still US.
Still YOU.
Still HERE.

Black out nights.

Flour in the air. A thick paste on our skin from sweat and the crush of The Pack. Through it all,

We are

Still Us.

You are going to slip.

Time never stops. You have to get back up.

The race is long and change is inevitable, but

You are

Still You.

The ashes have settled. Inhale the future. Exhale the past.

The rising sun shines light on new beginnings.

At the start of each day

We are

Still Here.

TELL US ABOUT YOU "Painting made me realize that I'm a creative person. It helps me connect with my family more." Kaitlyn Mestas (10)

FALL

SKELETON SPIRIT At the Homecoming Pep Assembly, Kate Cozzens (12) dances with a gold skeleton. She bought it in hopes to pass it down to future senior classes and start a new tradition. photo by Mia Seguin

The leaves change, and the sunsets get really, really pretty. I love being outdoors and seeing all the different colors. They remind me there's more to everything. It's not just the sun, it's this whole beautiful bigger picture.

Kate Cozzens (12)

TELL US ABOUT YOU "Living in Hong Kong shaped me into the person I am today. I love to travel, and I am always open to new experiences. Reese Hyde (12)

“Winter means new beginnings. Even though you’re not physically pulling anything out, you’re sort of dissecting who you are, trying to go into the new year as a better version of you. It’s a time to pick and prod at what makes you, you.” Teah Roberts (11)

YAY OR NEIGH Leaping over a fence, Kara Peters (10) rides her horse Chillie. Peters tried many other sports when she was younger, but horseback riding stuck.

TELL US ABOUT YOU "I volunteer at the humane society on the weekends. I really care about making sure everyone is loved. Kaden Wank (12)"

Riding gives me a different sense of freedom. I love working with a partner that I have a bond with. I trust the horse and she trusts me, too. Chillie was my first horse. My first genuine fall, gallop, and jump was with her.

Kara Peters (10)

Crowds of gold tutus and black beads.

Shouts of "I said I'm proud to be a Monarch Coyote."

The buzzer rings. Tears of joy. Victory. Until the end,

We are

Still US.

That sense of calm sets in.

You've bounced back. You're determined. Driven.

Celebrate the journey, the destination, and that

You are

Still You.

Breathe it all in.

We're rebuilding. We may not be there yet,

but at the end of the day,

We are

Still Here.
