What if we each saw the world from a different perspective? What if we could see high school life from the eyes of our classmates who are different from us? What if we took in all the viewpoints to see things from all angles?

We'd see the IB Bio lab from the perspective of junior Lily Griffin who has challenged herself with a college level course and now never has enough time to study.

We'd see the homecoming football game through the eyes of senior varsity quarterback, Timmy Higgins, fighting for every yard to clinch a victory and give the Lions their first 4-0 record in over 10 years.

We'd walk the hallways like 9th grader Juliet Sterling and remember the outlook of being the nervous new kid walking into Mrs. Koepke's MYP Language Arts class.

We'd hear the music through the ears of senior drum major, Josie Schell leading the Pride of Littleton Marching Band to their highest ranking in school history.

We'd remember the frame of sophomore, Jack Pearson, racing to King Soopers and back on foot to grab lunch during a ridiculously short 40 minutes because he is not old enough to drive.
