

What if the time we spent in high school could be experienced through another's eyes? Would we still feel the same rush at the winter pep rally watching Norah Ahnstedt play Hungry Hungry Hippo? Or have the same satisfaction getting an A in IB Biology? Would we still appreciate sleeping in on late start Wednesdays and being greeted by Ms. Benton's smile each morning? This year, we took a new look at old situations; this year we told it From All Angles.

This year, we saw the fierce determination of Dalana Jakovljevic as she led the Littleton girls basketball team to their first playoff win.

We saw the smile of pride as Ethan Bird joined 6 other Littleton athletes for signing day, committing to 4 more years of football at Adams State.

We cheered with Claire Ingham as she raced in adaptive swimming, completing the 50 Free with determination and style. She represented Littleton with pride.

We rooted for ICDC qualifier Andrew Dejardins as he took the stage in front of 3,000 people. With a smile, he raised his glass trophy for Top 7 in Principles of Finance.

We applauded show-stopping Bella Houck and dazzling Asher Morrisroe as they starred in The Wedding Singer and continued the legacy of outstanding performing arts on the Mane Stage.

GO TEAM! Wake Torres (12) shows his spirit cheering on the football team, dressed as the mascot! "Although it can get very hot, I love dressing as the mascot and getting the crowd hype," exclaimed Torres. photo by libby bubelis

DO IT! Kenzie Pullar (12) cheers on her classmates as they participate in the winter formal pep assembly activities. "I loved dressing in pink at the pep rally. It was neat to see all the games and the 'do it' chant in the dark. I also loved how everyone was dedicated to wearing their class color," commented Pullar. photo by nora bubelis
