

A large crowd of students at a school event, many with white face paint and cheering.

Black out nights.

Flour in the air. A thick paste on our skin from sweat and the crush of The Pack. Through it all,

We are Still Us.

Veronica Mireles (12),
Griffyn Weber (12),
John Hayes (12),
Arnaud Agasse (12),
Pierce Zickerman (12), and Mia Reinke (12)

photo by viviana ruiz garcia

You are going to slip.

Time never stops. You have to get back up.

The race is long and change is inevitable, but

You are Still You.

The ashes have settled. Inhale the future. Exhale the past.

The rising sun shines light on new beginnings.

At the start of each day

We are Still Here.

TELL US ABOUT YOU "I like to express myself through wearing different hairstyles every day. I can do braids in under 3 minutes." Emma McCoy (12)

It's been a little more than a year since the Marshall Fire.

HERE we are.

The flames are long extinguished, but it's not over yet. Time still moves. New foundations. New neighborhoods. New us. Together, we're recovering.

Crowds of gold tutus and black beads.

Shouts of “I said I’m proud to be a Monarch Coyote.”

The buzzer rings. Tears of joy. Victory. Until the end,

We are Still US.

Natalie Guanella
(12), Arezo Safi (12),
Amelia Rosin (12),
Hayley Luther (11),
Caroline Walley (12),
Avery Richardson (12),
Lindsay Pleva (11),
Reese Trobaugh (11).

That sense of calm sets in.

You've bounced back. You're determined. Driven.

Celebrate the journey, the destination, and that

You are Still You.

Breathe it all in.

We're rebuilding. We may not be there yet,

but at the end of the day,

We are Still Here.

