A Fashion Industry Dream

Anderson Fuentes Medina ('25) has been interested in fashion since he was a child, and many things sparked his interest, including his mother. “My mom always [used] to do fashion sketches for fun,” said Fuentes Medina. Years later, he “still looks at the [sketches].” Fashion can be seen everywhere and was especially popular lately, but Fuentes Medina has been interested in all things fashion for as long as he can remember. He was very interested in watching “fashion shows with [his] sister on TV,” and admired the amazing fashion each year at the Met Gala.

Fuentes Medina was interested in a few particular designers including Alexander McQueen and, “as far as fashion icons... [he has] always liked Lady Gaga.” Currently, Fuentes Medina is into a Punk style: “I love the punk and rock type of style because not many people have that [particular] style, so it’s very unique which is cool.” Fuentes Medina has big plans for his future regarding the fashion industry. He said, “Once I graduate high school I plan on moving to LA to [attend] fashion school... It’s kind of my whole dream right now.” Moving to LA would allow him to be exposed to a lot of fashion and meet people to hopefully help his dream of working in the fashion industry come to life.

Mr. Shelton and Mrs. Orvis bleed blue, white, and Eagle Pride.

Mr. Shelton was the athletic director and assistant principal. He worked around the clock, typically “eight to four Monday through Friday,” and then “usually after school until 9 o’clock in the evening three times a week” in order to attend sporting events. His favorite part of working at Broomfield was the culture because “over 50% of the students here are open-enrolled, which means that people want to be a part of this.” This creates a prideful environment and community that people want to be a part of. Both Mr. Shelton and Ms. Orvis agreed that fall was the most stressful season because “there are over ten sports happening at the same time,” so there was a great deal of excitement but a lot to manage.

Mrs. Orvis has been with BHS athletics since she started working here 38 years ago! Her job at Broomfield was to “register all athletes, plan banquets, get officials, and plan schedules and buses” amongst what seemed to be hundreds of other duties. She made everything go smoothly so the student-athletes, coaches, and spectators could have the best experience possible. Mrs. Orvis loved her job and her favorite part was the students. Along with Mr. Shelton, she has been the foundation of Broomfield and the reason why our athletics have been so successful.

“This is my first time doing an oil painting and it has been really exciting to try out a new skill.”

Kalena Egy ('23)

Oil painting is complicated within itself, but Kalena Egy ('23), a “first-timer,” has gone above and beyond with her art skills. Egy explained how she has always been into art. She was “in an art club in third grade” and this sparked her interest in it at an early age. She “prefers pencil drawings,” but she was interested in “learning how to paint well.” Egy has chosen to complete an oil painting which she describes as “more complicated to work with and more expensive.” She also explained how she “got [supplies] as a gift,” so she wanted to use them. She enjoyed drawing due to “the process of it and how relaxing it is.” Egy also expressed her love for being able to “capture real emotions of real people” within her art. She described her art as “realistic and expressive” and she also tried to “replicate her reference drawing” to help her become better with more practice. Egy’s biggest inspiration for her love for art has been her grandma because she “was an artist and paints.” Egy also found out her great grandma was “also a painter.” As of now, Egy doesn’t know what future projects she plans on doing, but she was “interested in chalk pastel drawings.”
