SENIOR SUNRISE

FALL

Dog days. Abigail Davis ('24) smiles in the early morning with her dog, Luna, and her friend Zoe Riggs ('24). Davis said Luna was scared of all of the people at first but eventually opened up. "She was just playing around with everyone, she loved it," Davis said. photo by: roewyn korwek

Friends for life. Posing with his friends, Peter Richardson ('24) makes memories at the senior sunrise. Richardson said they put the dog in the baby swing because he looked like a baby. "He wore a sombrero but he didn't like it... but he's cute," Richardson said. photo by: roewyn korwek

Group love. Alongside his fellow seniors, Haydn Benoit ('24) poses for a large group photo. While the event itself is a highlight, students also enjoy the traditions that come after sunrise during their partials. "Breakfast after was my favorite part. We went to First Watch," Benoit said. photo by: roewyn korwek

Rise and shine. Snuggled up under the early morning sun, Marie Georgescu ('24) smiles alongside her sister, best friends, and dog. Senior sunrise is all about making memories. Georgescu said it was, "a great experience... we watched the sunrise and got breakfast." photo by: roewyn korwek

FELINE fine

An untraditional animal makes an appearance at senior sunrise.

"His name is Binx the cat and this morning he jumped into his adventure backpack and was ready to go."

Layshaner Cooley ('24)

"[My favorite part was] taking pictures with all my friends, and seeing everyone there."

SO DANG early...

Seniors highlight the pros and cons of an early morning.

"I set my alarm for 4:45, because I wanted to look cute... but I ended up sleeping in anyway."

Madison Szpunar ('24)
