

"My favorite part about this play was being able to be a part of the mermaid scene. I loved when I was getting to be dressed up for this scene and seeing everyone dressed up with me," said Phineas Cohen (11).

"It was fun being able to finally see our hard work come together at the performances, given how hard and long we worked on it."

LIGHTS out

Student Name

The play, "Peter and the Starcatcher," incorporated many different special effects and lightings in order to accentuate the important messages of scenes. Specifically, in these scenes, the backstage crew dimmed the lights, as well as creating a black light affect, drawing in the audiences' attention.

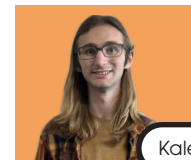

BACKSTAGE

Backstage crew explaining their favorite part about being on the "crew":

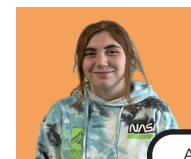

Joseph Campbell (12)

"I loved being able to building the set and getting to hangout with my friends while making something."

Kaleb Oakley (11)

"I really enjoyed the set. It was so well put together and this year incorporated very creative scenes."

Addah Secor (10)

"I loved getting the opportunity to meet a bunch of new people as well as being able to build and create the set."

Kylie Goodmanson (10)

"My favorite was getting to see all of our hard work come together in the end."

BEHIND THE SCENES...

Everyone sees the finishing product of all these amazing plays, but no one really understands how much work it really takes to put this all together. These are some of the stars, not on stage, but off, who ensured that the play ran smoothly. These people do everything from the lighting to helping with costumes and the cast members' props.

Following "The Play That Went Wrong," Broomfield High School's theater crew worked extremely hard rehearsing a spin on the classic Peter Pan, known as "Peter and the Starcatcher," which is arguably their best performance yet. This play exerted an attention grabbing twist on the classic, which left the audience astonished. The audience and actors both agreed on the great connections between the classic and the abundance of very-well put together scenes. Actor, Brenden Parry (9), explained his favorite scene in the play by saying, "I really enjoyed the end of act one because my character was very involved and played a big role. I also really liked it because it was the start of Neverland falling apart, which played a huge role towards the rest of the play. On another note, it was also sad because my character ended up dying in this part." As all the scenes were entertaining, some actors played a bigger role, which determined how the rest of the performance played out. The theater crew has always had a close-knit bond with one another, due to spending lots of time rehearsing together, and always having fun working on their upcoming pieces. "This play was so fun for me because I got to hang out with all of my friends backstage as well as just having fun performing and rehearsing with them during the process," said Trinity Klein (11). Overall, for the audience and the actors, the making and the final product of "Peter and the Starcatcher" was so rewarding as it was such an entertaining and beautifully performed piece.
