CURFEW CHECKS TAKEN TO A NEW LEVEL

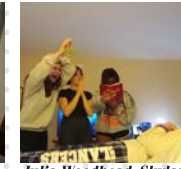

In order to make sure we were all in our rooms for bed, Miss Gill had us send group selfies for accountability... we got creative with it.

WHERE IT all starts

HEADLINES, DEADLINES, BYLINES, BOSTON.

For the first year ever, a group of Liberty yearbook students got to go on a field trip to Boston for the JEA/NSPA convention. It was a five day trip leaving on Nov 1, in which they took classes to teach them press laws, design techniques, storytelling skills, and how to spice up their yearbook. It was a wonderful experience, especially for those about to graduate.

"Being able to get closer with the people who went and getting new experiences was my favorite part of the trip," said Copy Editor Ava Lund 12. "It was also cool throughout the conference to see how different schools use their resources and seeing other schools strategies. The food was also BUSS."

Editor in Chief Emily Robertson 12, told us her most memorable part of the trip: getting to eat lunch and talk privately with the Boston Red Sox's photographer Maddie Malhotra.

"She really opened my eyes to how I may be able to pursue sports photography after high school. Even though I love everything about yearbook, taking sports photos is my favorite. It really inspired me knowing that could be me someday."

Coincidentally, Adviser Ellidh Gill got to see her high school yearbook adviser and introduce him to her students.

"Everything really came full circle," Gill said. "[Ed Larsen] was the reason I discovered my passion for wanting to become a teacher. It was surreal introducing him to my kids at a convention that I attended as his student a decade ago."

After an amazing week in Boston, the group arrived home and began to prep for their first deadline, applying all the newfound information they learned to create an award winning book.
