college choices

Planning the Future. Junior year can be controversial for students beginning to plan for the future as they start to take crucial classes for college. "College should be thought of and discussed during the junior year, but finalizing any decisions should be made during the senior year as there would be less time for your mind to change about your post-secondary goals," Kyrill Slavin said. Chris Meier agrees with Kyrill, "Just to avoid stress, I'd say that beginning to think and analyze what you want from college in junior year will help." Deciding on college plans can be stressful. "You want to give yourself time to figure out what you actually enjoy and what you're gonna do in life," Aden Garza said. Josiah Mena-Wenstrom has also begun to consider different paths he could take in college.

IMPACTFUL teachers

Throughout years of learning, certain teachers stand out to students for creating memorable classroom experiences. "Mr. Ketcham has a very involved teaching style and good lectures. I think he makes learning pretty easy and interesting," Cole Mezger said. Other students reflect on past teachers. "Freshman year, Mr. Page was really good at making high school a nice adjustment and making it fun after coming back from COVID. He knew what it was like to be a high schooler so he made his class fun, easy, and enjoyable," Rachel Nunnally said. Good teachers can help students, like Cece Baker, enjoy learning in a classroom. "Mrs. Thimsen has been one of my favorite teachers in high school," Cece said.
