HAPPY FOR HOCO!

Getting ready for their final homecoming, seniors Carissa Banks, Hazel Parker, and Eliza Austins take pictures together to look back on. "The music was better than last year, I had a lot of fun because I had a good group to go with. It was kinda hard to dress to the theme," said Banks. photo courtesy of carissa banks

SNAP SNAP!!

Sophomore Jaxon Lowe is posing with his friends before the dance. Despite the initial excitement of going to a party after the dance, Lowe expressed concern for it. "I was feeling pretty good about hoco and the after party, until I showed up and saw hundreds of people at the party knowing it wasn't going to end well," said Lowe. photo courtesy of jaxon lowe

2025 ON TOP

Junior Lilly Askins gets a hold of the ball and runs more than ten yards before getting her flag pulled by senior Ashlyn Volk. The seniors started the game out by talking smack and hyping themselves up. Askins said, "My favorite part of the game was proving the seniors wrong. The class of 2025 is better and always will be." photo courtesy of abigail sibel

WAS IT FAIR?

After a tough defeat, spectators reflect on how the Juniors defeated the Seniors

There was an abundance of missed or unfair calls towards the juniors- but the seniors won in my heart.

I honestly tried to help the seniors win but they quite literally threw away every opportunity they were given..its hard to blame a game on the refs when the losing team threw the ball...into the hands of their opponents...

The juniors had a good team, but I think it was definitely rigged towards them winning.

EVERY FLAG COUNTS

IN IT TO WIN IT

Junior Mylah Hasler pulls two flags against the seniors. Getting an early jump on the win. Hasler said, "It wasn't easy or difficult to pull the flags, it just really depended on the timing of everything. I got lucky by pulling as many flags as I did." photo by greta powell

BOYS GOT SPIRIT

Spirit boys Atticus Paykoc, Tyson Marshall, Gabriel Rodriguez-Tellez, and Joseph Lampo perform at the powderpuff game to hype up the crowd. This was senior Marshall's first year being a spirit boy. "I think overall the crowd wasn't as engaged as I expected they would be. It was very clear when they liked what they saw," said Marshall. photo courtesy of abigail sibel

PUSH SHOVE AND PULL.

Breaking a sweat to break the score, senior Natalie "Wheels" Flageolle runs towards the endzone. Flageolle was given the nickname "Wheels" from childhood based on her speed. "I feel I contributed to the game by trying my best to keep the energy up and keeping everyone on the team connected," said Flageolle. photo by abigail sibel

Legacy's annual powderpuff game brought a lot of tension between the grades and spirit to the homecoming dance

Powderpuff has been a traditional event for years. This event flips the gender roles in sports with female athletes taking over on the field and the spirit boys cheering on the sidelines. As the juniors and seniors competed to win this year's game, accusations were thrown across the field, as many expected the seniors to win. "From my perspective the juniors won fair and square. The seniors had their chances to come back." said Ms. Jennifer Dumas, one of the announcers for the game. However, as the game progressed there had been different opinions from seniors and what they had thought of the game." I personally think it was rigged because the juniors coach was on the field the whole time" said senior Hannah Atencio. Powderpuff was just the intro to the main event of the week, Homecoming. At the dance there was a variety of decorations from places around the world to follow the theme: Catch a Flight to Homecoming. Sophomore Hannah Ward said, "Homecoming this year was definitely better than last year; we stayed for a while and mainly walked around which is what I think most people did." copy by aleasea martinez and zoey duchene
