

SING LOUD
Freshmen Sally Ayad, Camille Christianson, Amelia Molliconi sing "Party in the USA" by Miley Cyrus. Being as loud as they could for the sing off between grades. "My favorite part was when the different grades had the competition to see who was loudest. It was really fun," said Ayad. photo by zoey duchene

WELCOME ABOARD, LEGACY LIGHTNING

Legacy kicks off the fall season with their yearly homecoming assembly

The fall assembly this year was a huge hit during homecoming week. With all of the events from poms and cheer's performances, crowning, sport teams running out, and games the boltz had no problem raising up some school spirit for the fall event. "It was fun! I think it's a good way to bolster school spirit." said junior Shevani Pujari. The energy and moral boost the assembly gave was evident by the eager participation of the crowd. Freshman Molly Payne said, "They did a much better job with being more interactive with the crowd than the pep assembly at the beginning of the year." Student government this year put lots of work into making sure everyone had a good time in preparation for homecoming. Student government member, sophomore Jake Hulstrom said, "It took us about two or three hours just to figure out the theme itself for homecoming, but seeing everyone have a good time makes it all worth it." The fall assembly this year took flight and created a togetherness few other events can achieve. copy by dallin westhoff

HEAR OUR VOICES

Twilight choir sings "The Star Spangled Banner" in front of the whole school. A tradition to kick off the assembly games. "It was weird singing in front of the whole school...Even so it turned out really good." said senior Ava Blakely. photo by zoey duchene

STRIKE A POSE

Spirit boy, senior Lawson Unruh poses to complete their performance. The boys had a hiccup right before they went on to perform. "We had our little group together saying 'okay we're gonna be here and here' and then Gabe out of nowhere decided to join us from the crowd when he wasn't there for the formation, so we had to change our formation on the spot." said Unruh. photo by zoey duchene

RINGING PRESSURE

Sophomore Uriel Arreola Allende tosses a ring to sophomore Paige DeCamp during the ring toss game. He felt there was an unfair advantage behind the game. "It seemed like the older grades knew what they were doing beforehand. It was probably rigged," Arreola Allende said. photo by dallin westhoff

HERE COMES ZEUS' SQUAD

WELCOME ABOARD

Spirit judges rock their pilot costumes, waiting for the competitions to begin. The judges decided which grade had the most spirit. Ms. Katherine Dumont said, "I think my favorite part probably was just seeing all of the school spirit and just the excitement in the students." photo by zoey duchene

WIN FOR THE SENIORS

Seniors Lawson Unruh and Ava Rotman face and cheer with the senior crowd. Rotman had little doubt about the seniors not taking the win. "I'm not surprised we won; me, Lawson, and Maddie have known each other previously and so we were able to communicate better than the other teams." said Rotman. photo by leila azarakhshi

50 GOING ON 15

The school sang "Happy Birthday" to Ms. Jennifer Adams for her 50th at the fall assembly

As a surprise for Ms. Adams, vice principal, Ms. Sierra Hoover announced to the rest of the school that it was Ms. Adams' 50th birthday during the assembly. "It was quite clear that the band was not prepared to play happy birthday," Adams said. "It was when everyone started singing it that was really sweet. I think that's the biggest number of people that have ever sung to me at one time, and I really like attention so that was awesome." photo by zoey duchene
