POURING SWEET DREAMS!

Several special needs kids participate in the coffee cart every Wednesday. The coffee is available for the staff of Cresthill. Colm Verhoeff (8) goes on the announcements to announce that the coffee cart is open and ready for orders. You must order by 8 am in order to get the coffee. "I like to make the teacher's day and make them energized," Verhoeff said. Photo by Rylie Inzana.

DO YOUR BEST!

While working in language arts Emily Newton (8), makes sure that she completes assignments on time. "I work hard in my class and I pay attention and participate," Newton said. Her teachers also enjoy having her in class and think she is a hard worker.

"Emily is a gentle and harmonious soul who is very courteous and supportive towards everyone," language arts teacher Mr. James Kelly said. "I love her humor and good-spirits as much as her dedication to her studies." Photo taken by Brandon Happs

CREATING STORIES, CHANGING LIVES

Drama director Mary Demolli hosted the fall play "Night at the Wax Museum" on Nov. 10 and 11. "I loved this play. (Students) build friendships that are gonna last all the way through high school and they learn how to work together. I'm so glad they got involved," Demolli said.

Lily Soklin (8) played one of the villains, Violet Sneed in this play. "I loved the people in this play the people were so nice. Playing Violet was such a fun experience," Soklin said. "Mrs. Demolli worked really hard to make it amazing, and I think people enjoyed it."

Other people were heroes though. River Mueller (8) was the museum's hero, finding the artifact and putting it in a safe place in the end. "It was a really fun play and it was great to see it all come together," Mueller said.

Bridget Partridge (8) played Heather, the young school teacher who took her students on a trip to this museum. "I like doing the play because you meet a lot of people and have a sense of family," Partridge said.

Jack Hallihan (7) was one of Heather's students in this play. "I liked the play because I got to meet new people and it was really interesting," Hallihan said.

1. MUSEUM ROYALTY

Projecting her voice into the crowd Charlotte Hybertson (7) loves her role in the play. Nov. 12, Hybertson played Anne Boleyn. "I liked playing my character because I got to do an accent, and I basically was just angry all the time. When you are on stage it can be a little scary but you just have to perform your best in front of the audience," Hybertson said. Photo by Lily Stone

2. AND SCENE Bowing to the audience, students Lily Soklin (8), Elliott McLaughlin (8), and Katalina George Gonzalez (7) soak up the applause from the crowd. "I felt really proud because I finished the play and had not screwed up," McLaughlin said. Photo by Brandon Happs

3. A GREAT FALL Falling down on the floor, River Mueller (8) struggles to get back up, Nov. 12. This stunt was shown at the Night in the Wax Museum play, which got a round of applause after shown. "Performing the stunt was super fun and I think everybody enjoyed it," Mueller said. Photo by Brandon Happs

4. LETS TALK IT OUT Playing the part of Bush Cassidy, a cowboy, Lucky Sherman (8) stands by as River Mueller (8) tries to break up a fight. "I did the play because I like doing plays and you get to meet so many great people," Sherman said. Photo by Lily Stone

5. SPEECH, SPEECH Speaking to her fellow actors and actresses, Marley Etzler (7) continues her speech. Nov. 12. "I liked the play because I got to meet a lot of new people and I tried something out of my comfort zone and that kind of gave me security," Etzler said. Photo by Brandon Happs
