little moments

It's the little things

The overlooked

It's the first crunch of leaves under our sneakers in fall

It's the switch to warm drinks

It's the budding of blooms in April

And the warm summer nights under indigo skies.

It's the annoying things

How we can never find a spot in the senior lot

How basketball games were over packed and stuffy

How we can barely walk through the cafeteria during block lunches

But it's everything else, too

It's that pause you take when walking into school and take in the mountains

It's the reflection in Viele Lake

It's the smell of freshly baked cookies from the IB store

It's snow days when our cars will barely move

It's that lull in the crowd at a football game: a moment of soft silence when time just stops

lost moments

We'll regret not going to that football game, but there's always the Boulder-Fairview game. That we'll never miss.

We'll mourn the Senior sunrise that lacked a sunrise
But it wasn't our last time sitting with friends.

And we'll think Homecoming was all it was built up to be...
and maybe it was
Or maybe it wasn't.
We'll forget it was our first. Our last.

So let's remember the smiles
the laughs
the friendships
when we lost track of time

IN THE STREETS. One summer evening, Emma Hardy (12) and Savannah Wiener (12) lie down under the street lights. "I loved that night because it was warm and felt freeing being in the summer. We played in a park in the dark and listened to music in the street and it felt like a memory that you look back on later in life. When the birds are chirping and the grass is green and the breeze is warm life feels so much easier," said Hardy. photo courtesy of emma hardy.

We relearn what structure is

How to schedule in Greenbriar traffic on our way to school

How to find that supposed work life balance

A newfound frost in the air
We dig out our puffer coats
Stuff our hands into our pockets
Our Starbucks iced drinks turn hot

COZY CAFE. In Trident cafe on Pearl Street, warmth is maintained despite the increasing outside chill. "I feel like Trident attracts a super creative community and provides me with a lot of artistic and musical inspiration that I don't really get anywhere else in Boulder," said Maya Chastang (12). photo by annika aumentado.

We're grumpier when the sun is gone
Our 360 days of Boulder sun seem meaningless when we're freezing
But we find joy in the moments we can get outside
From sledding down Tantra
To long ski days with friends
Maybe the cold isn't so bad after all

Our feelings fluctuate as much as the temperature

OUT AND ABOUT. Clarkson Kalla (12) stands at the top of a mountain while skiing with friends. "My favorite part of winter is skiing pow with the boys and that photo of Clark is one of my favorite memories because we got a fresh 20" pow day at Steamboat," said Eyberg. photo courtesy of toby eyberg.

ROAD TRIPPIN'. Haven Selby (12) and Natalie Chesney (12) drive across Colorado on a spring break roadtrip. "My favorite thing about the photo is how dirty the mirror is. We were driving back from a climbing crag and looking at cows," said Selby.

It's inevitable

We'll procrastinate

And forget the next assignment

Stay up til 3am to finish our LA essay or wake up at 6am

to study for that math test

We'll keep going

Because we have to

We'll forget to pause

Every year we think we've settled

Just to end up uncertain once more

Somehow the moments we

That joke made our rough days better
Reminded us why we love that

We'll gather during block lunches
All together for the first and maybe

It's these smiles

Because nothing can or will capture that moment

But we'll be thankful

Because we were there

CHEESE. Sonya Li (12) focuses a camera to take a photo of Dagny Bachman (12) during a dinner party in the summer. "I like when I look back at the photos and almost relive the event and the joy. It's nice to see genuine smiles," said Bachman.
