GO LONG

Samantha Whitted (12) formed a flag football team this past summer with her club soccer teammates and friends

After Whitted, who hadn't played football in several years, received a message from an old coach of hers asking if she'd consider playing in a flag football tournament, she immediately took him up on the offer. "There was a tournament and he wanted to put a team together," Whitted said.

"My dad really liked me playing football, so I wanted to do it for him and we just kind of rounded up a bunch of my club teammates and school friends."

The tournament, which took place at Aurora Sports Park, was hosted by the Denver Broncos and the NFL FLAG football league. "We just decided that it would be kind of a cool experience," Whitted said.

The LoCo Ladies went on a run all the way to the championship, where they'd end up losing. "It was really fun. It was definitely an unexpected event that happened because we weren't expected to win, but we almost did," Whitted said.

Ronnie "Suge" Valles (12), a transfer from New Mexico, counts on the game of basketball to guide him through his move to Colorado

Valles is super familiar with moves on the court—the stepback, the crossover, the double clutch, the fade away, and the always hard to defend floater. He has perfected them all. But a month into his senior year, he had the opportunity to perform a different kind of move, one that went across state lines. "Right away, as soon as I emailed Coach Kloster, his email back to me was super awesome. He just accepted me right away, asking me to take a visit as soon as I got here and the team offered to help me move into my house," Valles said.

As the starting point guard of his team back in Las Cruces, Valles was comfortable where he was at. But when new opportunities presented themselves, Valles and his family made the move to Longmont.

When the time came to decide where he would spend his last year of high school, joining Trojan nation was an easy choice. "I chose to come to Longmont High School because everyone was very welcoming when I got here and it's a beautiful campus," Valles said.

Although basketball has been around him his whole life, Valles recalls being surprised by the change in Colorado basketball from New Mexico's style. "A big difference between playing in Las Cruces and Longmont has been the students and staff are super into it," Valles said.

Now, Valles has asserted himself as a crucial piece of the 2023/24 boys basketball team's success and continues to shine as a student and member of the community.
