

the WRITING on the WALLS

FIND THE...

- Waldo
- Pig
- Turkey
- Umbrella
- Skis
- Pumpkin
- Violin
- Wi-Fi
- Mushroom

"I think the graffiti on the bathroom connects people because there's a drawing or a funny saying, and someone responds."

— Kara Peters (11)

"I think graffiti does build community. I like seeing what other kids are thinking. It's always a nice reminder that we're all sitting through the boring lectures together."

— Lauren McKenzie (12)

"Sometimes graffiti connects people. Sometimes it divides them. It can be controversial and weird, but some of the drawings are funny. Like, I saw a buff squid."

— Luca Medina (11)

"Every couple of years there's a whole new set of words that students are using. It makes it hard for me because once I get to know the new slang, it's gone. I think the word of the year is rizz...I don't know what the heck that is. I had to look it up. The one from my youth that they're bringing back is dope. I'm glad people know what dope is now because back in the day that was my word."

— Social studies teacher Justin Abbott